

Admission Requirements

The programme is designed for graduate students from all professional or academic backgrounds holding a University First Degree (Bachelor) with a minimum average of B. Graduates with lower qualifications that show proven capabilities and/or sufficient work experience may be also considered for admission. Since English is the language of instruction at AUW, applicants must also meet the specified English proficiency requirements before they can be admitted. This Master programme is for female students only.

Degree Award

For the award of a Master Degree, students must pass all courses and obtain a minimum accumulative average of "B" (70%).

Career Opportunities

Our prospective graduates can pursue careers in a wide range of areas of specialisation and in various types of institutions including federal and state governments, academic and research institutions, national and international NGOs and civil society organization. Also, master degrees allow students to continue their studies by pursuing a Doctoral Degree.

Ahfad University for Women

Regional Institute of Gender,
Diversity, Peace and Rights
(RIGDPR)

Master Programme in Gender and Peace Studies (GAPS)

The RIGDPR aspires to create a society where women and men are viewed and treated equally and are fully respected, regardless of their ethnicity, religion, socioeconomic and political background, and to create conditions in which all live in peace, dignity, and their rights are protected and respected in a society free from all forms of abuse and violations.

Introduction

Ahfad University has been offering courses on Women Studies since 1986. In 1997 it started a graduate programme offering a master in Gender and Development, which led to the establishment of the Institute of Women, Gender and Development (IWGD) in 2000. In 2008, it launched a master in Gender and Peace Studies.

In January 2010, thanks to the five year project RIGDPR funded by the Norwegian Agency for Development Cooperation, the old IWGD was promoted to become the Regional Institute of Gender, Diversity, Peace and Rights (RIG/DPR). Among other things, it works through a partnership with other African Universities to build capacities at higher education level in Africa, and to promote gender equality and human rights in diversity contexts. On this basis, it is launching a new Master programme in Gender and Governance.

The new RIGDPR inherits the good work of the previous years, and continues to offer the well established Master in Gender and Peace Studies, which has been taught for four years already.

Aim of the programme

This programme is aiming to reach gender equality in the areas of peace, conflicts and democracy. The aim of the programme is to contribute to fulfill the agenda of women's empowerment and enhance efficiency in participation in peace processes and conflict resolution. Moreover, to improve the capacities of graduates by making them more able to compete and work in various fields, especially in areas related to women/gender rights, human rights and legislations related to gender-based violence during conflicts.

Learning Outputs

The programme consists of a comprehensive and interdisciplinary package of specialized courses that will enable students to:

1. Master knowledge and critical and analytical skills on issues related to gender equality, women's rights in conflict contexts, major contemporary challenges to peace, sources of conflict and violence, and peace building through non-violent instruments.
2. Master knowledge and analytical skills apply these theories in the prevention, management, resolution and transformation of conflicts as well as general peace building processes. .
3. Articulate and develop gender sensitive policies in development, conflict management and resolution, human rights and political economy of armed conflicts, and peace building processes.
4. Independently work with academia, media, governments, INGOs, NGOs as well as within wider community based, regional and international contexts.
